

Also known as Hikuri, he is the shaman of ancient times, the patron of all shamans: TATEWARI led the first pilgrimages.

Guided by the shaman, the participants, usually ten to fifteen in number, take on the identity of deified ancestors, as they follow Tatewari "to find their life".

TATEWARI stands beside the shaman when he is curing a sick person, and his messengers are feathers. Like the feathers of the shaman's wand, the "muvieri" they are imbued with life, they have feeling, they move around and are capable of speech and action.

Through this information we can trace a relationship between TATEWARI and healing processes and inner search for peace and tranquility. TATEWARI is a deity related with spiritual growth and extreme peace and relaxation states as a result of the spiritual balance produced by peace, tranquility and meditation.
